copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

The "biggest classes" are about to be ground out.

It is a rare June day when the heavens do not weep.

The political entries are narrowing down as the day of starting approaches.

The circus will bring along the usual raffish; so it is well enough to be prepared.

In trying to be bigger and busier and more like New York, Boston has to have its subway fires, too.

Williamstown people are said to be out "trapping" for automobilists who go beyond the speed limit. Look out!

Bryan is still a live issue in the West apparently, for he was strongly endorsed for president in 1905 and the mention of his name brought out a "storm of applause."

The fact that a Democrat was elected governor of Oregon while Republicans won out in all the other offices is laid to this particular Democrat's leanings toward Roosevelt. Of course, too, Gov. Chamberlain is a popular man.

A "Tilden Democrat," writing to the St. Albans Messenger, bemoans the fact that the party strength has been cut down from 19,000 in 1876 to 7,000 now, due, he says, to the acts of the party managers. "Isn't it about time," he asks, "that this old Atkins-Sumley combination join The New York Journal's Down and Out Club, as they have certainly gotten us into a pitiable condition, and still stand ready to run the thing until they can get the party down to zero. All they care for is to control our state and national committees, so that it case the administration should happen to change, they can continue to distribute the patronage. And it seems to me there is but one way to bust them, viz, vote for Clement on a fusion ticket." The writer winds up with "Perhaps some day the honest young Democrats will get rid of these old fossils and run things so as to build up a party that stands for some principle, instead of pup. And why is it not a good time to begin now?" These are strong words from a Democrat to a brother Democrat; but there is cause for alarm for the future of the Democratic party of Vermont if it continues in the same diminishing ratio. Whether a little Clement medicine will help to brace it up is yet a question, but a "Tilden Democrat" apparently agrees with his brothers in Barre.

WHEN RESCUE WORK IS DIFFICULT

Drowning accidents are becoming so frequent this early in the season that they in themselves should afford a warning to those who go in and on the water, not to frighten persons from venturing in boats or from entering the water for bathing and swimming, but to use common sense. The warnings of parents and others not to run needless risks are well and good, but there should be added to the admonitions the advice to retain one's presence of mind when one is thrown into a dangerous position. The double drowning tragedy in Lake Bomoseen, near Rutland, on Wednesday, furnishes a good text for a sermon on the value of calmness in an emergency. In this case, to rely on the supposition, a father attempted to rescue his son, an eleven years old boy. In the attempt the boat carrying the older man was overturned and the occupant was precipitated into the water. Whether or not the tipping of the boat was due to lack of presence of mind is not known, for no one knows the actual facts of the affair. But it is quite certain that once in the water the older man was grasped about the neck with an embrace of steel by the boy, for when the bodies were subsequently brought to the surface the younger person's arms were still tightly clasped about his father's neck, so that considerable effort had to be exerted to separate them. The inference arises, therefore, that the boy, becoming frightened, seized his would-be rescuer in such a manner that the latter was utterly powerless to do anything. Very likely tightening his hold about the neck so closely that strangulation was caused.

It is quite probable that a full grown man if he knew anything at all about water would not have been dragged down had not such a strangle hold entirely incapacitated him from movement; and it is more than likely that a man would be fully able to keep himself and an eleven years old boy on the surface of the water long enough for other rescuers to arrive, since the struggles of the two were seen by others on the lake. But two lives were sacrificed through the panic of the younger person, which is perhaps not to be wondered at in one of that age. The incident furnishes a lesson for all, that the person in danger of drowning, instead of helping his chances for life, actually destroys those chances when he grasps a rescuer about the neck. Life savers will advise that the safest and surest way is to gain support by placing the hands on the rescuer's shoulders, leaving the latter untrammelled for whatever desperate efforts he may be called on to make.

GRADUATION AND BANQUET.

Exercises Were Held Last Night at the Northfield High School.

Northfield, June 8.—The commencement exercises of the Northfield high school were held in the assembly hall last night and were largely attended, there being over 300 people in the hall. The speakers handled their subjects with remarkable efficiency, which showed very careful preparation. All were heartily applauded. The members of the graduating class were Misses Mae Morrill, Mildred Richmond, Margaret Edgerston, Elizabeth Flynn, Alice Shepard, Mae Gillespie, Florence Holland, and Ralph Hedges, Marshall Dunham, Walter Frost, Charles Blake, Charles Bingham, Fred Johnson, Earl Cutting, Mansur Stone and Ford Thomas.

After the exercises the banquet of the Alumni association of the Northfield high school was held at the Northfield home, and the following toasts were responded to, with Hon. Zed S. Stanton as toastmaster: Vermont, E. J. Connel; Northfield-on-the-Dog, Mrs. C. S. Richmond; reading, Mrs. Kate Terrill; Northfield high school, Mrs. Homer Flint; Class of 1906, Miss Mildred Richmond; Alumni, C. A. Edgerston; Higher Educational Institutions, C. H. Spooner, president of Norwich university; reading, Mrs. Kate Terrill; Our Directors, Dr. J. H. Welch; Woman, Reber C. Gady. The banquet was brought to a close by singing America.

ELEVATED TEN FEET.

But William Bordo of Winoski Escaped Death.

Winoski, June 8.—William Bordo, who is employed on the ledge of his father, Peter, Bordo, had a miraculous escape from serious injury and probably death yesterday over a seven-foot hole tamping in a three-foot charge of powder preparatory to blasting off a corner of the ledge. In some unknown manner the entire charge exploded, throwing Bordo about ten feet in the air. When he alighted it was found that the top and bottom band of his trousers had been blown away, the left side of his moustache burned off, his hat blown away and the left side of his face and head singed, besides a few slight scratches on the face. The only serious injury was that received from a few small stones which struck him, one in the back of the right thigh and the other on the left knee pan. Dr. E. A. Burdick was called and looked after the injuries.
